Dave has earned a reputation for finding solutions that avoid disputes when possible, and handling them efficiently and aggressively when necessary. He is experienced in issues related to employment contracts – and was a contributing author to the Texas Lawyer published book, Texas Litigators' Guide to Departing Employee Cases.

In addition to his trial practice, Dave serves as outside general counsel to several businesses. In this capacity, he has negotiated contracts and large distribution agreements, and advised on other aspects of business management, operations and employment policies and procedures. This includes negotiating and drafting employment and severance agreements, writing employment manuals and policies, and conducting regulatory compliance investigations. Dave has also handled a number of 'business divorces,' and helped resolve partnership disputes. "Part of my purpose is to stop disputes before they start," he explained.

"Our firm emphasizes civility, efficiency and, to put it bluntly, completely out-preparing the other side on the facts, the law and the evidence."
